Big Corn Crop in Linn County

From Linn County Bulletin.

Propitious weather throughout the months of June, July and the first three weeks of August warrant, at the present time, a record-breaking corn crop in Linn county. Experienced and level-headed farmers tell us that the present crop promises to equal in quality that of the record-breaking crop of 1902, and the acreage is by far the largest on record. All that is necessary to verify the truth of these statements is a drive through the fertile valleys and upland regions of our county just now and view the vast oceans of dark green corn waving like mighty billows as far as the eye can reach, and note how the big ears hang over and point to the soil that produced them, as if to advertise this as the modern land of Canaan. Between these oceans of corn may be seen meadows dotted with hay stacks, indicative of an average yield of two tons per acre, while great ricks of wheat and oats await the arrival of the threshers, who have the biggest job upon their hands this year in the history of the steam thresher.

We were forcibly impressed with the greatness of Linn county the other day when a gentleman just in from Indian Territory, in answer to our question said in substance, "We have had a long drouth in that region of the territory in which I live. Corn is almost a failure. From the moment I started on my trip to this place there has been noticeable a gradual and continuous improvement of crop conditions until I reached the capital of Linn county, Mo., the center of the garden spot of the world. From Tulsa county, Indian Territory, to Independence, Kansas, the corn crop may be considered poor. It improved rapidly as we crossed the state of Kansas and continued to improve until I reached my destination in Linn county, Missouri, and I don't see how it could have improved any more, had I continued my journey."

The gentleman is right. And, according to the best information we can get, one might start from any point of the compass within a radius of 300 miles and travel in a direct line toward Linn county, Missouri, and find the same conditions true. Missouri is not only the best state in the union from the stand-point of material resources, but it is the best governed state in the union and Linn county is in the most favored section of Missouri. Let us all join in singing the doxology.

The Chautauqua Making Good

From Meadville Messenger.

Aside from the minor discomforts occasioned by the rain the Meadville chautauqua has proven greater and better than our two previous entertainments. We are proud to say that no chautauqua in all North Missouri has proven a greater success both in financial receipts and entertainment of the people than Meadville's. We have in the past two years gained a reputation that no other town has so far attained. The Meadville chautauqua programs have been composed of the best talent available in our country. Our promises have been kept. But one lecturer has ever failed to appear on contract time and his place was filled by the use of the telegraph and at a far greater cost.

At a Sunday school picnic held near St. Louis last Saturday, Geo. M. Buerhmann, chief deputy in the internal revenue office at St. Louis under E. B. Allen, was accidentally shot and killed. A target shooting contest was in progress when Mr. Buerhmann was hit in the left temple by a ball from a rifle accidentally discharged by a farmer.
